Valuing your contents

Many people underestimate the value of their household contents and find that claims payments are reduced because they are underinsured. The checklist provided can be used as a guide to help you assess the value of your contents and possessions.

Contents should be insured for their full replacement value as new and not the original purchase price. It is your responsibility to advise us of the correct sums insured and use of this checklist should not be considered to be a full and accurate calculation of the value. You should always consult a professional valuer to obtain an accurate valuation.

If you need anymore advice about valuing your household contents please get in touch with the Hayes Parsons Private Client team, we would be happy to help.

Services directory

As a specialist Private Client insurance broker, we are often asked who to contact for valuations, home security and risk services. We have therefore put together a directory of Private Client services that may help you and provide additional risk management of your home, contents or motor vehicles.

This directory is for general information purposes only and does not constitute personal advice or a recommendation to any business, product or service. We do not have specific arrangements with any of the organisations listed within the directory and so you are responsible for deciding whether the company's services are suitable to your needs.

If you require anymore information or are looking for advice on a service not listed within the directory, please get in touch with your usual Hayes Parsons contact.
